

Caregiver Resilience

The toll caregiving takes—and how to carry it without breaking.

THE WEIGHT YOU'RE CARRYING

53M+

Americans are caring for a family member right now — more than 1 in 5 adults.

23%

say caregiving has made their own health worse — up from 17% just five years earlier.

1 in 3

family caregivers experience clinically significant depression.

~50%

carry a caregiving burden heavy enough to affect their daily well-being.

*None of this reflects how much you love them. It reflects how much you're carrying.
Turn the page for ten ways to set some of it down.*

The Prepared Life Caregivers Tool Page

Designed to meet you where you are in your journey.

PAIRS WITH THE FREE CAREGIVER BURNOUT CHECK-IN TOOL

Sources: AARP & National Alliance for Caregiving, "Caregiving in the U.S." (2020) · umbrella review of caregiver depression & burden meta-analyses (2025)

10 Ways to Stay Grounded

You can't pour from an empty cup. Small, steady things that help you stay whole while you care for someone else.

- 1 NOTICE THE SIGNS EARLY
Exhaustion, irritability, feeling numb — not a character flaw. Your body asking for relief.
- 2 LET "GOOD ENOUGH" BE ENOUGH
You don't have to do everything perfectly. Progress matters more than perfection.
- 3 PROTECT SMALL POCKETS OF TIME
Even ten quiet minutes to breathe or sit still can reset your whole day.
- 4 SAY THE HARD YES: ASK FOR HELP
You were never meant to carry this alone. Let people show up for you too.
- 5 SET BOUNDARIES WITHOUT GUILT
Boundaries protect your relationship as much as your own well-being.
- 6 MOVE YOUR BODY
A short walk, a stretch, fresh air — movement is medicine for a tired mind.
- 7 STAY CONNECTED
One honest conversation with someone who gets it beats a dozen surface-level check-ins.
- 8 KEEP A SIMPLE RHYTHM
Regular meals, water, and sleep aren't small things. They're the foundation everything else stands on.
- 9 NAME WHAT YOU'RE FEELING
Sadness, anger, grief — let the feeling exist without rushing to fix or hide it.
- 10 REMEMBER: YOU MATTER TOO
Taking care of yourself isn't selfish. It's what makes you able to keep showing up.

Caring for someone you love shouldn't cost you yourself.

REST

ASK FOR HELP

BREATHE

Life happens. Best have a plan.
The Prepared Life · thepreparedlifestore.com

